

Having trouble viewing this email? Click here

Minneapolis | Chicago

Having an Transition Plan Will Put You in the Driver's Seat

When we talk to business owners about the value of transition and succession planning, we're talking about orchestrating a business exit that fulfills their unique financial and personal goals. Tackling a task of this magnitude can be daunting, and owners sometimes ask whether devoting the necessary time and money to this process is really worthwhile.

When owners don't proactively plan their exit ahead of time, they can leave cash on the table - or worse, have an exit failure. They can fall short of what they need to transition successfully.

Exiting without a pre-established plan is a highly reactive approach. What usually happens is that an owner will decide it's time to sell and meet with an investment banker or valuation expert to get a sense of what the business is worth. Then, they take the company to market and, in the best case scenario, entertain offers. By this time, they are highly invested in the selling process and do whatever is necessary to make a transition happen, even at the expense of meeting their own needs and goals. Had they planned in well in advance, they would have been in the driver's seat instead of the back seat.

How to Get in the Driver's Seat

The four basic steps to exit planning are:

- Step 1: Determine your exit objectives by establishing your financial needs and goals.
- Step 2: Determine the current value of your business.
- Step 3: Uncover any gaps between what you need versus how much you can get.
- Step 4: Implement a plan to build business value; work on closing the value gap.

Your exit plan will provide direction on building the value of your business; this gives you more options when it's time to make your planned, or even unexpected, exit.

Techniques for Increasing the Value of Your Business

There are numerous ways to build up the value of your business, and your advisor will recommend those that are the best fit for your business' situation. Here are two that are commonly used:

1. Put Stay Bonuses in Place

One technique that exit planners use to motivate managers to remain with a company post-closing is the stay bonus. An effective stay bonus accomplishes three tasks: 1) it gives the key managers a reason to stay, 2) it is structured so that it increases the value of the company, and 3) it includes a penalty (usually in the form of a covenant not to compete) that prevents key managers from taking key clients, vendors, or trade secrets with them should they leave before or after the sale.

2. Clean Up Buy-Sell Agreements

One method of protecting business value is to clean up buy-sell agreements (again, well in advance of any contemplated sale or transfer). When a majority shareholder wants to sell, sometimes he or she can't because the buy-sell agreement fails to compel a minority shareholder to sell at the same time.

It would be a mistake to assume that all shareholders will want to exit at the same time, or that employees will want to stay with the business once there has been a change in ownership.

For these (and many other) reasons, exit planning is indeed well worth the time and money owners devote to it. If you have any questions regarding exit planning techniques, feel free to contact us.

Visit www.lharrispartners.com or contact one of our partners:

Jeff Johnson, Partner
Minneapolis Office
ph: 952.944.3303

Read More

Lee Eisenstaedt, Partner
Chicago Office
ph: 312.775.4055

Read More

Tom Siders, Partner
Minneapolis Office
ph: 952.944.3303

Read More

For more resources on exit planning, including our Exit Routes for Business Owners White Paper, visit our online Resource Library.

STAY CONNECTED

Forward this email

This email was sent to lee.eisenstaedt@lharrispartners.com by jeff.johnson@lharrispartners.com | Update Profile/Email Address | Rapid removal with SafeUnsubscribe™ | Privacy Policy.

L. Harris Partners | 6900 Shady Oak Rd | Suite 210 | Eden Prairie | MN | 55344